WAR GAS PERILS NOT CONFINED TO MEN WHO FACE DEADLY FUMES AT FRONT

Our picture shows a young Frenchwoman whose dangerous work is that of filling the deadly melinite shells. She is forced to wear a gas mask to protect her from the death giving fumes. Aside from the fact that she is part of the gigantic war machinery of France a bit of sentiment finds expression in the flowers which she wears pinned to her working dress. They were given to her by a "poulu" who had just left for the front. In all of the principal countries at war women have taken places of men, thus releasing the latter for more arduous duty at the front.

NO PEACE UNTIL GERMANY HAS WON, CHANCELLOR SAYS

Referring to the actual conditions on the war fronts, the chancellor said that the attacks made by the central powers in the southeastern theatre had frustrated the great plan of the entente to sever the connection of Germany with the Orient by the separate conquest of Turkey, Bulgaria and Austria-Hungary.

"On the whole, therefore," he said, "we see isolated successes of our enemies on the Somme which cannot influence the general situation. On the other hand, we have the successful repulse of all enemy attacks and the frustration of the enemy's intentions in the Balkans and the failure of his plans. Thus the gigantic war is proceeding. The war aims of our enemies are announced without disguise and can allow of no misinterpretation. Their purpose is territorial covetousness and our destruction. They propose to give Constantinople to the Russians, Alsace-Lorraine to the French, Trentino to the Italians and Transylvania to the Rumanians.

"Since the first day of the war we have sought nothing but the defense of our rights, our existence and our freedom. Therefore, we are able, first and alone, to declare our readiness for peace negotiations. I spoke on Feb. 9, 1915, and repeatedly afterwards with sufficient clearness on that subject. Does anyone dare to demand that we shall make offers in the face of Premier Briand's declaration that the conclusion of peace today would be a sign of weakness or that memory was dead? The entente continues the war because it hopes to be able to attain Utopian war aims. The last of conquest of our enemies is responsible for the daily heaping mountains of corpses."

The chancellor appealed to Premier Briand to remember that the last hopes of France were perishing on the battlefield and indignantly denied that the German Emperor exercised his influence over the Russian Emperor to prevent the development of the Russians in the direction of freedom. He denounced Great Britain, saying that she wanted "the holy of Asia Minor and the German colonies."

"The British leave no doubt," he said, "as to what they wish to make of Germany. Our existence as a nation is to be crushed. Militarily defenseless, economically crushed, boycotted by the world and condemned to lasting sickness—that is the Germany which England wants to see at her feet. Then, when there is no more German competition to be feared, when France has been bled to death, when all her allies are financially and economically doing slave work for England, when the neutral European world must submit to every British order, every British blacklist, then, upon an impotent Germany, the dream of British world supremacy is to become a reality."

The chancellor said that he realized the troubles of the people coincident with the war and that he shared the deep sorrow for the fallen and mutilated.

"I bow my head," he went on, "before the heroism with which women and men without distinction of rank or class bear their sacrifices, united in an ardent love for the fatherland. Still more sublime and still greater is the defiance of death with which our sons and brothers in the field withstand the violent assaults of the enemy who, superior in numbers, are fighting with the utmost bravery. World history—human history—has never before seen the like."

The chancellor declared that the German people again had an opportunity to show their appreciation of the heroism of the army by subscribing to a new war loan. He asserted that the nation firmly believed in sacrifice.

"I know we can also rely on the fighters behind the front," he said, "to give all their available money to support the gigantic work of our fighters in the field. With clenched fists but open hearts we will stand behind them, one man and one people."

Concluding his speech, the chancellor exclaimed:

"Germany will not be permitted to think of peace while her house is burning. She must first extinguish the fire."

After the chancellor had concluded the Reichstag adjourned until Oct. 5.

The allies cannot break through the German lines on the Somme, the chancellor told the Reichstag, according to an account of his speech cabled to Reuters by way of Amsterdam. The German prime minister made a similar statement in regard to the eastern front.

"The English and French, it is true," he said "have achieved advantages. Our first lines have been pressed back some kilometers and we have also to deplore heavy losses in men and material. That was inevitable in an offensive on such a mighty scale."

Couldn't Tell.
"Would you say the world is better now than it was a century or two ago?"
"I really do not know. I wasn't here a century or two ago."—Detroit Free Press.
